Details

A long commute isn't exactly the most motivating start to your morning. But with a hot and freshly brewed coffee or tea thanks to the GSI Outdoors Commuter Java Press by your side, you can get pumped for the rest of your day.

This convenient on the go coffee press doesn't have a plunger rod, instead, it has a sliding inner carafe for pressing your coffee. This also has the benefit of a double wall of insulation, which will keep your drink nice and hot.

The non-slip foot will keep the cup upright while fitting into most car cup holders, while the spill-resistant top and sealable spout prevents heat loss and your precious brew from escaping. The foam sleeve provides a secure grip for your mitts and protects them from the hot contents of the press.

If you're always madly dashing to your car, bus or train to make it in time for your morning commute, then that long ride will be made better with a brew made in the Commuter Java Press from GSI Outdoors.

Sliding inner carafe for unencumbered drinking and a double wall of insulation
