When you're in need of a streamlined sleeping bag for your lighter adventures, but you don't want to spend an arm and a leg, check out the Equinox 220 from Black Wolf.

This bag uses Hyperloft 4T insulation which provides a superb warmth to weight ratio. The Equinox 220 has a comfort temperature of 3 Celsius and a limit temperature of -2 Celsius making it a very versatile choice. Black Wolf has also had it tested to the international standard which is ISO23537:2016.

This bag also has some user-friendly features such as a hidden security pocket for your phone or headtorch, a single action toggle for adjusting the hood and glow zip pullers for low light conditions. There's also a zipper guard to prevent any snags, and the draft flap stops warm air from escaping out of your snug sleeping bag.

When space is a premium, pop it into the included compression sack, then air it out and the end of your trip using the attached hanging loops. The Equinox 220 is a durable sleeping option for those wanting a performance sleeping bag, without the steep price tag.
